Club Red girls pushing for more blood donors

Brighton High School's Club Red has been holding blood donation sessions at the school. The club is encouraging all students and staff to donate blood and has organized a competition to see which class can donate the most blood.

Club members have been visiting other schools in the area and have been invited to speak at a conference in Sydney. The club is hoping to raise awareness of the importance of donating blood and to encourage more people to donate.

The competition will run for the next six months and will include a donation drive at each school. The club is encouraging students and staff to donate blood and to help out their community.

The Brighton High School's Club Red is hoping to raise awareness of the importance of donating blood and to encourage more people to donate. The club is encouraging students and staff to donate blood and to help out their community.